Course Overview

From resolving misunderstandings with colleagues to negotiating complex deals and leading project teams, you use influence as part of your everyday work life. While there are several different styles of interpersonal influence, research shows that assertive behavior has the greatest impact on individual success and organizational performance. The good news is that influence is a learned skill, and Positive Assertiveness training, some self-discovery, and a healthy dose of practice, people can develop their ability to be assertive.

This dynamic two-day Positive Assertiveness Training course will help you improve teamwork, focus discussions, and build relationships, but will also help you become competent, constructive, confident, and perform at your best. Further, you will learn how to ask for what you need, handle confrontations gracefully, and put your ideas forward with confidence.
